Dear Readers

Europe is the land of surprises. Here tourism plays a pivotal role in generating revenue with an annual arrival of more than 50 million tourists from Asia, Australia, the Middle East, and U.S.A.

From bohemian Swiss charm Interlaken to playful Denmark's cultural capital- Aarhus and from lively Berlin to eternal Rome, Europe offers some of the best travel destinations in the world.

Here the culture is the finest example that the full potential of human faculties transcends beyond geographic or linguistic bounds. Aarhus shows that cultural bond while Interlaken, a small traditional resort town in Switzerland offers the best meeting venues with ample MICE opportunities.

In this edition, we are also focusing on Europe's massive hotel industry which has seen this year a huge growth. We are also highlighting Berlin Wall Trail, which reminds the dark war days and the breakdown of German social, political and economic life. The Berlin Wall Trail is a 155 kilometers long walk of history and remembrance which, as well as taking in key points across the city, also leads into its less well-known areas of Germany. Here you can also get a multimedia guide providing more background information on the history of the Berlin Wall.

So keep reading and plan your next trip.

Brazil cleans beaches before its tourism season starts

Months after thick oil began turning idyllic beaches in Brazil into “black carpets”, workers and volunteers wearing rubber gloves race against time to scrape off the remaining fragments ahead of the country's peak tourism season. Paiva, Itapuama and Enseada dos Corais in the northeastern state of Pernambuco are among hundreds of beaches fouled by an oil spill that began to appear in early September and has affected more than 2,000 km of Atlantic coastline. As ocean currents brought large globs of crude to shore near the capital Recife in recent weeks, locals rushed to the normally picturesque beaches and used their bare hands to remove the toxic material coating sand, rocks and wildlife. Thousands of military personnel have been dispatched to help clean up the oil that has killed dozens of animals, including turtles, and reached a humpback whale sanctuary off Bahia state that has some of the country's richest biodiversity.

Growth in Dubai tourism boosts holiday homes

The continued growth of Dubai's tourism industry has encouraged investors and homeowners to capitalise the abundance of opportunities in the holiday homes market, leading to an exponential growth in short-term rental units in the emirate and adding to the broad range of accommodation options that are available for tourists. The Department of Tourism and Commerce Marketing has established clear legislations and regulations to ensure a comprehensive classification and verification process when issuing permits for holiday homes.

The BERLIN Wall Trail

A walkthrough into its origin!

Berlin has rebuilt itself from the dark past. It celebrates itself with an eclectic mix of new and classic architecture and cultural institutions. The capital of Germany has been a centre of politics, culture, media and science. It has been 30 years since the Berlin Wall crumbled; a wave of revolution swept away the system that was controlling the lives of the people. In 1961, the Berlin Wall was built to stop the exodus from the eastern part of Germany to the west; more than 2.6 million East Germans out of the total population of 17 million escaped between 1949 and 1961. The German Democratic Republic or GDR saw losses of skilled professionals and was getting closer to economic and social collapse. This led the East German government close the border entirely by erecting a wall overnight on August 13, 1961. The eastern authorities called it as the anti-fascist protection barrier that protected East German from the west. In 1990, the reunification took place which removed the differences between the cities. The Berlin Wall Trail takes you through the remaining traces of the Cold War spread around some 160 km.

Bikes are easily available on the Berlin's public transport network, so one can start the tour from any point. The Berlin Wall Memorial is a tribute to the people who fled East Berlin and the victims of the death strip. The history of the division is explained through an open-air exhibition that uses the situation on Bernauer Strasse. The Monument in Memory of the Divided City and the Victims of the Communist Tyranny and the Window of Remembrance can be found in the memorial. On the other side of the street is the Visitor Center and the Documentation Center with a viewing platform. The Chapel of Reconciliation, the excavated foundations of a former apartment building's façade functioned as the border wall until the eighties.

The exact former location of the Wall in the centre of the city can be recognised through the Cobblestone Markings. On November 9, 1989, East and West Germans wanted to remove all its traces.

After the wall was built, the Brandenburg Gate landed in no-man's land; the Wall officially blocked it from West Berlin. A smaller wall is known to restrict the access to the monument for East Germans. It was once a symbol of division between the German and Berlin during the Cold War but now it is a symbol of peace and unity. Visitors come here to get a glimpse of the world behind the Iron Curtain.

Checkpoint Charlie saw many attempts to escape from the East Berlin. Tourists can see an open air exhibition in the corner of Schützenstraße and Zimmerstraße which reveal the story of failure and success.

There is an installation by the artist Frank Theil and a commemorative plate.

The East Side Gallery was painted by international artists and is one of the longest open-air galleries in the world. The 1.3 km-long, remaining stretch of the Wall in 1990 has a depiction of Leonid Brezhnev and Erich Honecker kissing. This is a classic attraction which should not be missed.

During the Cold War, the Glienicke Bridges served to exchange information. It connected the cities of Postdam and Berlin. It required strong negotiations between the two superpower of the time, the United States of America and the Soviet Union to cross the bridge. One can also get a view of the bridge in the Oscar nominated movie 'Bridge of Spies'.

The Japanese are known to donate some 10,000 trees "to bring peace in the hearts of the people". They planted trees in different sections of the former Wall. Cherry tree avenue in Pankow looks pretty during the end of April. Tour Berlin for a better understanding of its history that plays a large role in reshaping the world.

A cultural

Aarhus

One of the emerging destinations in Europe for city-breakers and food lovers, Aarhus is situated in the east coast of Jutland Peninsula in Denmark. 187 kms from the capital city of Copenhagen, this Vikings founded city is now the second largest metropolis in Denmark. With more than 1.378 million populations as estimated in 2016, Aarhus suffered many bombardments and barricades at the time of Swedish Wars. Though the Germans occupied this place twice in the 19th century, they didn't destroy the beautification.

Aarhus derived its name from 'Aros' which means 'place at the river's mouth'. Somewhere around AD 900, Vikings discovered this small trading town on the northern shores of fjord, a natural harbor area. In 1441, the place received the privilege of a market town. With gradual industrial revolution, in the 20th century, Aarhus grew to be the second largest city in Denmark.

Culture and Festivals : Today Aarhus hosts numerous festivals, cultural and sports events of national and international stature. Well-known for its vibrant night life and live music, VoxHall, Train and Radar are some of the best student hangout places in Aarhus. Musikhuset or the Music House is one of the best glass-made concert halls in this city. Besides, Annual Aarhus Festival which takes place in the month of August deserves a special mention as it's the best place to enjoy food, jazz and viking, all together.

Know about its Architecture : In this fascinating city, one gets to see the merging of old with new. Great designs and architecture is already present in Aarhus in the form of Central Town Hall or the City Hall which was built in the 1940's, the Old Town Hall, ARoS Aarhus Kunstmuseum, Moesgård Museum, Aarhus Theatre, Viking Museum, Dokk1 and similar landmarks make a traveller traverse from 12th century architecture to the cutting-edge building of iceberg apartment built in 2013.

Foodies ahoy! Currently the city has been swept over by trendy cafes, new eateries, restaurants, provedores and microbreweries serving delicious traditional Danish and Nordic cuisines, the food which earned the prestigious title of European Region of Gastronomy. Radhuscafeen is one of the oldest restaurants of Aarhus opened in 1924. Some of the high-end restaurants like Nordisk Spisehus, Frederikshøj, Restaurant ET, Restaurant Varna and others are some of the well-honoured food joints for culinary fineness in Denmark.

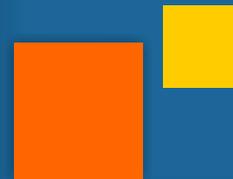

Travel can't go without Shopping : One of the biggest draws, Aarhus has everything that a compulsive shopper needs to indulge in, right from department stores like Magasin, malls, local and international labels like Marc Jacobs, COS to various independent boutiques.

Attractions around

Aarhus Botanical Garden: Founded in 1857, this impressive botanical garden is spread across 53 acres of land. Some of the best highlights include gardens with plenty of fun-filled summer programmes taking place in amphitheatres, large hothouses covered with subtropical plants and a great place for walking, strolling, and picnicking.

Beaches: In and around Aarhus, one can find some of the best coastlines in Denmark. Bellevue Beach is one of the popular beaches located 4 kms away from the northern part of Aarhus. However, Den Permanente is a popular beach among the youngsters organising bonfires and barbecues quite frequently and relishing summer nights!

Tivoli Friheden: This amusement park is one of the resorts where people of all ages can visit and spend some thrilling moments. Situated at the middle of Marselisborg forest, this park has rollercoaster ride, 5-D Cinemagic, Sky-Tower, Ferris Wheel and many such interesting activities and games to participate in. So, while vacationing in Aarhus, a tourist is never short of activities and is spoilt for choice! As many travellers have described Aarhus as more of a 'feeling' than just a mere city. As a result, when one leaves Aarhus, he carries a lot of happy memories with him which he cherishes for a long time.

A look into the growth of EUROPE'S HOSPITALITY INDUSTRY

Special Feature

European countries have seen a robust growth in hospitality sector, thanks to infrastructure developments in the region that is attracting international investors towards strong assets and opportunities in the European market.

Currently, the hotel industry in Europe is undergoing a massive transformation process in order to get adapted to new products, latest technological upgrades, hospitality & catering services and distribution trends with the new age technology. These trends are generated by a changing base of clients that continues to grow rapidly.

Anti-tourism and hospitality boom

According to the latest data from STR, Europe's hotel industry has seen positive results in three key performance metrics during Q1 and Q2 2019. Spain has seen record boom in hotel sector despite the looming fears of anti-tourism. In Madrid—which has faced fears of effervesce bursting after several years of strong visitor growth—occupancy improved from 2.6 percent to 71.1 percent. On the Iberian Peninsula, the tourist arrivals continue to grow under the effect of their improved economic context but the business conferences and events, especially in Barcelona, are on a downward trend.

Coexistence of domestic and global brands

Domestic and global brands coexist in almost all European cities. Most of the international brands coexist with domestic brands, as well as local and private label hotel operators whose distribution is mainly controlled by local or international tour operators. They have guaranteed certain business levels during global recession, but the tour operators prevent the hotels from taking advantage of the moment of the European economic market cycle.

Specialising in hospitality services

Regarding the specialization of services and experiences, professionals pointed out the importance of cooperating with the sub-operators specialised in certain services. Europe has seen a huge increase in specialisation and what's shaping out as the future is that there will be different suppliers in the same space, managing different elements of a resort or hotel.

Entering in flexible workspace market

The flexible office space market is developing across Europe and hotel operators are already capitalising on it. Transforming hotel lobbies into communal workspaces is an innovative way for hotel brands to maximize the earning potential of real estate assets, in turn strengthening their brand amongst the guests and the wider community.

Acceleration of hotel development

Germany and some of the destinations in the United Kingdom account for nearly 60% of pipeline rooms currently under construction. The hotel sector is also expected to absorb additional supply in the medium term due to strong tourism growth forecasts. In Germany, in spite of strong business activities, some cities are on a downward trend. Düsseldorf, Cologne, Hamburg and Leipzig recorded a downward trend while Nuremberg, Munich, Berlin and Stuttgart recorded an increase of 15.4%, 8.6%, 8.5% and 3.6% respectively. Italy envisions a positive change that can be explained by good results recorded in Bologna, Turin or Milan.

WTM London 2019 saw a 77% increase in ministerial attendance as well as a higher quality of WTM Buyers' Club Members. It confirms WTM London as the place for senior travel professionals to interact, connect and understand the trends that will determine the future of the tourism industry.

In total, almost 50,000 visitors from 182 countries attended the three-day event at ExCeL London. There were around 1.2 million business meetings conducted and over 110 conference sessions held. This all contributed to a total of £3.75 billion worth of travel industry business deals being signed.

This year the WTM Buyers' Club was re-formatted to include a stricter vetting process, which focused on inviting only the top industry buyers with the best reputation and purchasing power.

During the event itself, many landmark deals were signed for the travel and tourism industry. These included a deal between easyJet and Atout France that will see a €1 million advertising campaign launched in the UK to promote French destinations.

In addition to this, several large booking deals occurred at the event this year, which will see clients such as Saudi Arabia, Indonesia and the Seychelles secure increased stand-space heading into the 2020 edition of WTM London.

Furthermore, as this was the 40th anniversary of WTM London, this was a show with a difference. Celebrations took place across the regional inspiration zones to mark the significance of this anniversary, with countries from around the world bringing a slice of their unique culture to London.

The event programme for WTM London continued to advance to reflect the modern trends dominating the travel industry. There were sessions on topics as diverse as responsible tourism, LGBT travel, aviation and the crucial role of technology in the future of travel – thus creating a conference programme filled with fascinating content.

With high-profile events such as the annual Leaders' Lunch and the UNWTO & WTM Ministerial Summit, tourism ministers flocked to the event; there was a 77% increase, taking it from 43 Ministers in 2018 to 76 this year.

The co-located Travel Forward event also saw similar successes this year with visitors experiencing the latest in travel technology. In only its second year as a dedicated travel technology show and conference - exhibitor stand space at Travel Forward increased by 9%, including 49 new exhibitors debuting their companies to the global travel industry.

Highlights of the innovative Travel Forward conference programme included sessions from leaders in the travel tech industry such as Sector Director for Travel UK at Google, Becky Power, and Managing Director of Virgin Hyperloop One in the Middle East & India, Harj Dhaliwal – to name only two. All of the 33 sessions covered insightful topics outlining how the future of travel will look alongside the next developments in technology.

London Travel Week was officially launched over the first week of November and encapsulated the various events surrounding WTM London throughout the capital. With tens of thousands of senior travel professionals ascending on London for WTM, London Travel Week's diverse collection of networking sessions, conferences and awards helped to create a truly global hub for the travel and tourism industry.

WTM London's Senior Exhibition Director, Simon Press said that WTM London 2019 was unquestionably a great success. They are delighted to have been able to facilitate the business and creative connections of 50,000 attendees, exhibitors, buyers and media in order to form the future of the travel industry.

By welcoming almost 80 Tourism Ministers and increasing the quality of Buyers' Club members at the event this year, it proves that WTM London is not only the event where ideas arrive, but where decisions are made. They challenge them to keep developing this event and to make sure that everyone who travels to WTM London, Travel Forward and London Travel Week – as well as BorderlessLive in September - gets the best possible experience.

Simon Press also added that with more than £3.75 billion worth of deals being generated at WTM London 2019 - this has shown how crucial it is to attend from a business perspective. We are incredibly proud of all that WTM London has achieved in the last 40 years and can't wait to see how it develops over the next forty years.
